Dear Detective,

Earl Evers here. I am a Private Investigator in the city of Lovely, Florida. I either received your voicemail, or missed your call. Either way, I know you are looking for more information. I've been told that you are helping the LPD in the case of the Independence Day Killer. The information I have for you may or may not be anything of importance but sometimes it's the smallest things that can help us crack a case.

I believe you were calling because of my involvement with Danny Dobs, the husband of the first victim Dolly. Danny hired me to help him, not too long after the Independence Day Killer took the life of a 3rd victim. He had felt the LPD had considered him a main suspect and he had concerns that his current windfall of income would make him look even more guilty.

He wanted me to dig up dirt on Bianca Brice. He had hopes that the information shared with the LPD would take the heat off of him and put it on her. The problem was that only information I could find on Bianca was either unsubstantial or irrelevant. In observing her behavior after Hopper's death, she didn't seem to be a woman in mourning as you would expect someone to be.

There was one thing that didn't sit well with me. I discovered that Bianca was in and out of foster homes until she was 17. She then moved in with her high school sweetheart, Steve Smith. Steve died later in a fluke fire, in the office building he was working in. That death occurred on the 4th of July. Coincidence? Maybe. Maybe not.

Sincerely,

Earl Evers, PI
